

SCOPES ANTI-EVOLUTION TRIAL UNDER WAY

WHEELS OF JUSTICE START TO GRIND TODAY

16 JUSTICES OF PEACE AND COUNTY OFFICIALS MEET TO SELECT JURY PANEL

DAYTON IS EXCITED BECAUSE COOKVILLE, TENN., MAY GET THE CASE

(By United Press)
Dayton, Tenn., July 6.—The wheels of justice started to grind in the Scopes' anti-evolution trial here today when 16 justices of the peace and county officials met at the court house to select the jury panel. About 15 names were to be drawn. Meanwhile, the rest of Dayton was in a state of suspended animation, its hearts and hopes turned toward Cookville, Tenn., where defense counsel was to move today to have the case transferred to a federal court.

John R. Neal, chief of the defense counsel, was at Cookville to file with Federal Judge Gore an application for an injunction that would prevent the trial of the Tennessee high school teacher from being held here. While the purpose of this move by the defense is to remove the trial from surroundings which they feel are not calculated to increase the seriousness and dignity of the proceedings, Scopes' counsel based their application for an injunction on the ground that the State of Tennessee in denying John T. Scopes the right to teach biology is depriving him of his livelihood without due process of law.

The teacher is charged with teaching evolution in violation of a Tennessee statute which forbids instruction in matters contrary to the letter of the Bible on the subject of the re-creation.

The Town of Dayton, nestling in the foothills of the Appalachians, has made extensive preparations to stage the trial and receive the thousands of visitors the case is expected to attract. The possibility of an injunction means that what promised to be the biggest event in Dayton's history—past, present or future—may be taken away.

ANTI-RADICAL MEMBERS RULE IN MILL CITY COUNCIL

(By United Press)
Minneapolis, July 6.—Anti-radical members of the city council, who hold the helm for the first time in several years, swung into action today by inaugurating its slate of officers for the coming administration.

T. E. Jensen, radical alderman, whose election is being contested, was elected president of the council several weeks ago when the conservatives conducted the usual caucus. John Ryan, first ward alderman, conservative, elected after a two years forced absence from the council, was named vice president.

Conservative aldermen hold the balance of power in the new council by a 16 to 8 ratio. Fourteen members constitute a working majority. The contested elections may increase the conservative group.

Plant Physiologist Finds Corn Will Grow Four Inches a Day in June

Ames, Iowa, July 6.—To find out, with some degree of exactitude how much corn will grow on a "corn day" in June, Dr. A. L. Bakke, plant physiologist of the Iowa Agricultural college, made careful measurements. He found that from 1:30 p. m. June 20 to the same hour June 26—six days—the corn made a growth of more than 26 inches, or an average of nearly 4 1/4 inches a day.

Dr. Bakke further found also that during the five hours from 8:30 a. m. June 21, to 1:30 p. m. corn grew two inches; also that the highest growth recorded for a 24-hour period was five inches, on two successive days. The least growth for a 24-hour period was recorded on June 25, 2.76 inches.

The men had been given some food by their captors, but were almost famished when found. The men said they were called to the mountains June 23rd by a telephone message. TRYING TO PICK HANDSOME MARSHAL

(By United Press)
London, July 6.—Dick Whittington, three times Lord Mayor of London, has a lot to answer for.

During his tenure of office it was decided that on all ceremonial occasions he be accompanied by a Marshal, whose main qualifications were good horsemanship, a handsome countenance and an erect military figure. The institution holds good to this day.

Hence, recently there has been much pruning and preening among elderly retired army officers for the coveted position. When the vacancy occurred some few weeks back on the retirement of Major R. J. Smyly, two hundred applications were received.

It was a difficult task to select the city's "Handsome Man." Judges of a beauty competition have an armchair job compared with this. Anyway the list has been boiled down to five. But at that the judges have stuck. The Court of Common Council is at a loss. All five hold the necessary qualifications to ride before the Lord Mayor's coach. All five are modern Apollos and Beau Brummels.

10,000 VISIT LUM PARK TO OBSERVE 4TH

LOCAL LEGION POST IS WELL PLEASED WITH PATRIOTIC SPIRIT SHOWN

EVERYTHING ON PROGRAM WAS STAGED EXACTLY AS IT HAD BEEN PLANNED

Brainerd's Fourth of July celebration was a decided success, greater even than the American Legion, under whose auspices it was staged, had even anticipated. It is estimated that at least 10,000 people visited Lum Park, where the entire program of the day was held. According to some of the local post officials, the out of town visitors began gathering on Friday evening, and many camped at the park that night.

The parade opened the day's festivities. Out of the large number of business houses, civic and fraternal organizations that had promised to prepare miniature floats for entry in this parade, only six actually entered. This was a keen disappointment, both to the Legion and to the many visitors. It was hoped to make this feature one of the really big numbers in the day's program.

Heading the parade were Larry McPherson and his sister Marie, dressed to represent Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty. Following this was the Brainerd Lions club float, then Luverne Johnson, dressed as George Washington, with Glendora McDonald as Martha Washington. These little folks took their parts exceptionally well, and much credit is due to those who prepared the costumes.

The Wright hardware store's float followed next in line, with the Brainerd Rotary float next. Roy McPherson, dressed as a clown, furnished the comedy of the parade. The Hayes-Lucas Lumber Company and Henrich's store of Northeast Brainerd, and the Brainerd Electric Co.'s floats completed the list, with Master James Johnson bringing up the rear of the march, with the Boy Scouts and Brainerd Municipal Band.

The judges, Mrs. W. S. Orne, Mrs. Wm. Graham and Mrs. Carmichael, awarded the first prize in the floats contest to the Henrich store. Its float represented a large skyrocket, upon which rode a little girl.

Second prize in the floats contest went to the Wright hardware store. Prizes were also given to the children dressed as clown, George and Martha Washington, Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty.

Commander George Sweet of the local Legion post, presided at the patriotic program, introducing Rev. E. A. Cooke, who pronounced the invocation, and Hon. Harold Knutson, representative from the Sixth District, who gave the address of the day.

Mr. Knudson made a strong plea to preserve the constitution, which was the outgrowth of the Revolutionary war, and the birth of this great nation. He asked for a loyalty to this country and the principles for which it stands.

The afternoon was given over to band concerts, by both the municipal and Boys' band, to a long program of sports and aquatic contests, the feature of the latter being the fancy and difficult diving act of Mrs. Dixie Thompson and Miss Imogene Clarkson. These two daughters of Neptune gave a very creditable performance which gained the hearty applause of the large audience. Mrs. Thompson also acted as judge of the diving contests which followed. The dancing in the pavilion was enjoyed by many during the afternoon.

The fireworks, both daylight and evening, were of an especially high character. The evening exhibition of fireworks was presented over Rice lake, and brought forth nothing but the highest praise. They were beautiful and out of the ordinary, and were set off exactly as planned, and without the usual long waits or misfires.—(Continued on Page 7)

Jury Which Tried Oswald Alleged Illegally Drawn

Cloquet, Minn., July 6.—In filing a motion for a new trial of a case recently decided in district court here, Gerald V. Barron, attorney for William K. Oswald, has raised a point that is said to be entirely new in Minnesota, as it affects the drawing of juries. At the time of the trial Mr. Barron filed a written challenge of the entire petit jury panel, alleging that it was illegally drawn. The motion will be argued July 11 at Duluth, before District Judge E. J. Kenny.

INDIAN WALKS INTO A TRAP

ALLEGED SLAYER OF D. J. McKINNEY TAKEN NEAR RUSH CITY

(By United Press)
Rush City, Minn., July 6.—Joe Davis, Indian, sought as the slayer of D. J. McKinnen, Pine county farmer, walked into a trap here yesterday after eluding authorities for 48 hours. After his capture Davis made an alleged confession. He admitted shooting McKinnen after a quarrel over Miss Margaret Norris, St. Paul, his cousin. He is held in the county jail without charge pending grand jury action.

RAIL FIREMAN MYSTERIOUSLY SHOT AND KILLED IN CAB OF ENGINE WHILE AT HIS WORK

(By United Press)
Fairbault, Minn., July 6.—Frank Hudson, 35, fireman on a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road branch line train was mysteriously shot and killed in the cab of his engine today. Engineer Jerry McGraw noticed that the steam was getting low and turned to see his fireman slumped down in the cab. When he reached over, Hudson was dead. Investigation showed that he had been shot through the head with a 22-calibre rifle bullet. The train was running local between Wabasha and Fairbault.

TRYING TO PICK HANDSOME MARSHAL

(By United Press)
London, July 6.—Dick Whittington, three times Lord Mayor of London, has a lot to answer for. During his tenure of office it was decided that on all ceremonial occasions he be accompanied by a Marshal, whose main qualifications were good horsemanship, a handsome countenance and an erect military figure. The institution holds good to this day.

Hence, recently there has been much pruning and preening among elderly retired army officers for the coveted position. When the vacancy occurred some few weeks back on the retirement of Major R. J. Smyly, two hundred applications were received.

It was a difficult task to select the city's "Handsome Man." Judges of a beauty competition have an armchair job compared with this. Any way the list has been boiled down to five. But at that the judges have stuck. The Court of Common Council is at a loss. All five hold the necessary qualifications to ride before the Lord Mayor's coach. All five are modern Apollos and Beau Brummels.

POLICEMAN WOUNDED IN A GANG FIGHT

(By United Press)
St. Paul, July 6.—Patrolman Raymond Micke is today confined in Ancker hospital suffering from injuries received in a gang fight Saturday night. Micke was attempting to quell the disorder when several fighters attacked him at once. One of the gang was arrested.

10,000 VISIT LUM PARK TO OBSERVE 4TH

LOCAL LEGION POST IS WELL PLEASED WITH PATRIOTIC SPIRIT SHOWN

EVERYTHING ON PROGRAM WAS STAGED EXACTLY AS IT HAD BEEN PLANNED

Brainerd's Fourth of July celebration was a decided success, greater even than the American Legion, under whose auspices it was staged, had even anticipated. It is estimated that at least 10,000 people visited Lum Park, where the entire program of the day was held. According to some of the local post officials, the out of town visitors began gathering on Friday evening, and many camped at the park that night.

The parade opened the day's festivities. Out of the large number of business houses, civic and fraternal organizations that had promised to prepare miniature floats for entry in this parade, only six actually entered. This was a keen disappointment, both to the Legion and to the many visitors. It was hoped to make this feature one of the really big numbers in the day's program.

Heading the parade were Larry McPherson and his sister Marie, dressed to represent Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty. Following this was the Brainerd Lions club float, then Luverne Johnson, dressed as George Washington, with Glendora McDonald as Martha Washington. These little folks took their parts exceptionally well, and much credit is due to those who prepared the costumes.

The Wright hardware store's float followed next in line, with the Brainerd Rotary float next. Roy McPherson, dressed as a clown, furnished the comedy of the parade. The Hayes-Lucas Lumber Company and Henrich's store of Northeast Brainerd, and the Brainerd Electric Co.'s floats completed the list, with Master James Johnson bringing up the rear of the march, with the Boy Scouts and Brainerd Municipal Band.

The judges, Mrs. W. S. Orne, Mrs. Wm. Graham and Mrs. Carmichael, awarded the first prize in the floats contest to the Henrich store. Its float represented a large skyrocket, upon which rode a little girl.

Second prize in the floats contest went to the Wright hardware store. Prizes were also given to the children dressed as clown, George and Martha Washington, Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty.

Commander George Sweet of the local Legion post, presided at the patriotic program, introducing Rev. E. A. Cooke, who pronounced the invocation, and Hon. Harold Knutson, representative from the Sixth District, who gave the address of the day.

Mr. Knudson made a strong plea to preserve the constitution, which was the outgrowth of the Revolutionary war, and the birth of this great nation. He asked for a loyalty to this country and the principles for which it stands.

The afternoon was given over to band concerts, by both the municipal and Boys' band, to a long program of sports and aquatic contests, the feature of the latter being the fancy and difficult diving act of Mrs. Dixie Thompson and Miss Imogene Clarkson. These two Daughters of Neptune gave a very creditable performance which gained the hearty applause of the large audience. Mrs. Thompson also acted as judge of the diving contests which followed. The dancing in the pavilion was enjoyed by many during the afternoon.

The fireworks, both daylight and evening, were of an especially high character. The evening exhibition of fireworks was presented over Rice lake, and brought forth nothing but the highest praise. They were beautiful and out of the ordinary, and were set off exactly as planned, and without the usual long waits or misfires. (Continued on Page 7)

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Fort That Figured in a Scandal

Neither the Belknap or Teapot Dome incidents are the only cases of scandal in the President's cabinet, for in 1858 Secretary of War John B. Floyd was under fire for his connection with the sale of Fort Snelling, Minn., to Franklin Steele for $90,000. The usual congressional investigation followed, and eventually the federal authorities recovered possession of the post.

The history of Fort Snelling dates from 1805 when Lieut. Zebulon Pike purchased from the Sioux Indians a tract of 100,000 acres, valued at $200,000, at the confluence of the Minnesota and Mississippi rivers. Pike must have been a shrewd bargainer for he got it for $200 worth of presents and 60 gallons of whisky!

The War of 1812 delayed establishing a military post there until 1819 when Col. Henry Leavenworth with the Fifth Infantry began building Fort St. Anthony which in 1824 was renamed Fort Snelling by Gen. Winfield Scott in honor of Col. Josiah Snelling, Leavenworth's successor.

Fort Snelling had a long list of commanders who later became prominent, among them Zachary Taylor, the "Old Rough and Ready" of the Mexican war and President of the United States; W. T. Magrader and C. E. Smith, Civil war generals, and E. R. S. Canby, the "martyr of the Lava Beds" in the Modoc war of 1872-73. The famous Dred Scott case is also connected with Fort Snelling for Dred Scott was the slave of Post Surgeon Emerson at Snelling and Scott was married to a negro girl there in 1836.

By 1840 Fort Snelling was an important place because it was the extreme northern outpost in the march of civilization into the great Northwest. There thousands of Indians gathered to trade—and also to fight, for the ancient feud between the Sioux and Chippewas repeatedly blazed out into war. In the Civil war it was the rendezvous for Minnesota troops and it was the center of activity during the terrible Sioux outbreak of 1863.

Snelling was also the scene of a training camp during the World war, and it is now one of the important military posts maintained by the War department. Not far from the field where St. Paul society today parks its automobiles to watch the officers from the post play polo, there stands an old vine-covered stone tower, the only relic of the Fort Snelling of pioneer days and an interesting symbol of contrast between the old and new.

Coffee That's Fit For a King

WHEREVER it is morning, on this side of the world or the other, the delicate aroma of the fragrant cup of coffee permeates the air. What would we do without our morning coffee? Ten minutes is sufficient for percolated coffee and three minutes for boiled. To make a delicious boiled coffee use 1 cup of ground coffee, 1 egg, 1 cup cold and 6 cups boiling water. Wash, break and beat the egg, add 1/2 cup of cold water, pour it on the coffee, add the boiling water, boil three minutes, and add the other 1/2 cup of cold water to settle. FISH EATING BIRDS DESCRIBED

F. H. Uhler of U. S. Department of Agriculture, Lectures at Lake Home

MRS. J. A. THABES HOSTESS

Company Assembled at Thabes Cottage on Love Lake Near Gull

A number of Brainerd ladies enjoyed a very unusual treat last Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. A. Thabes invited them to her home on Love lake to listen to a talk on fish-eating birds by F. H. Uhler who had been sent up here by the U. S. department of agriculture to discover what birds, if any, were making serious inroads on either the industry or the sport of fishing.

Mr. Uhler belongs to the division of economic biology in the department of ornithology. The business of this particular division of the department of agriculture is to discover, by an examination of the contents of bird stomachs, what birds are useful to man, and what ones harmful.

Mr. Uhler stated that sometimes a bird that was harmless in one part of the country was found to be very destructive in another section. He gave the meadow lark as an illustration. Although that bird is a delightful summer visitor here, it is much hated by the owners of Louisiana rice fields, as that is where it goes to fatten up, previous to its long migration across the Andes.

Mr. Uhler exhibited specimens of the black, common and Caspian tern and called attention to their distinguishing characteristics. He also spoke of his work among the blue heron of heart (sometimes called Crane) island, in the lower end of Gull lake. He expressed the hope that this island might be made a bird refuge for the preservation of this interesting species.

Mr. Uhler was sent to this section of the country particularly to study the double-crested cormorant, but found that he would have to go still further north to find this dexterous fisher.

Asked concerning the reliability of a statement made by a popular lecturer on birds to the effect that if all the birds were banished from a tract five miles square, it would become as barren as the Sahara within a few years, Mr. Uhler said he thought that might be true. He stated that he had found as many as two hundred insects in a bird's stomach, and a bird's stomach was re-filled several times a day. But, he said that sometimes birds ate the insects that destroyed the grain until the grain was ripe, and then ate the grain and in such cases it was hard to determine whether or not their usefulness was greater than their destructiveness. It was plain to see, however, that he was a friend of the birds and a farmer would have to bring considerable evidence of their destructiveness before he would advise the extermination of any species—even the much berated crow. This was shown by his defense of the Chinese pheasant. He said that complaints had come in to the department that they were destroying the corn fields of Minnesota. But, upon investigation, they found only one field that had really been destroyed. In that particular section, these beautiful birds had developed a taste for the succulent seed bulb, and they would just clip this off and leave the rest of the plant untouched.

After Mr. Uhler's interesting talk, the hostess served dainty refreshments. Those present then decided that they would like to learn more about our feathered friends, so a bird club was formed with Mrs. J. A. Thabes chairman and Miss Jean Mosier secretary.

Persia in History

Persia or Iran, in the Old Testament called Elam, is situated in southwestern Asia. Its early history is mythical. For some time the country was ruled by the Medes, living to the north, but in the year 559 B. C. the Persians under Cyrus revolted against the Medes, overthrew the Medo-Babylonian monarch, conquered Asia Minor, and became masters of the East. Cyrus, the king of the Persians, was killed in battle in 529 B. C.

Merely a Legend

New York, July 6.—Since many women insist upon wearing gloves in Summer time, the washable glove is the most sensible type one can wear. These are usually short-sleeved affairs, or short slip-ons, in light tan shades and they are worn with short as well as long-sleeved frocks.

Among the washable types which have proven successful are chamolis, washable suede, doeskin, fabric and silk. Chamolis and doeskin should be washed in lukewarm water and soap-suds and soap should be left in them. If the soap is rinsed out, the glove becomes hard and shrinks. In rinsing, squeeze the water out with the hands and do not twist or wring as this gets the glove out of shape. All washable kids should be dried slowly in a cool place. Never attempt to dry by heating.

The washable suede glove is also washed in lukewarm water and suds but in the case of suede all soap should be thoroughly rinsed out of it as soap stiffens and shrinks suede.

Fabric gloves are washed in cold water, to which have been added mild soap-suds. Both fabric and silk gloves require soap that has no alkali

Very little soap should be used on silk or fabric, as it destroys the texture of the gloves. One may iron silk or fabric gloves when still slightly damp, with a slightly warm iron.

After any glove has had several washings, it has a tendency to either shrink or stretch. The glove that has stretched, whether kid, fabric or silk, may be shrunk by washing in very hot water. The glove that has shrunk should be worked on the hand while wet or stretched with a glove stretcher. Kid gloves should always be worked on the hand while slightly damp, as they will then hold their shape better.

In buying wash gloves, one must not buy a size too large in the theory that they will shrink, for in most cases the wash glove stretches.

THEY LIKE KNUTSON

We were down in Akeley country the other day, motoring among the farmers, and were pleased to see how highly they regard our congressman of the sixth district, Harold Knutson. It seems that a group of farmers had made application for daily service on a rural route, all the petitions had been signed, the road improved by being widened and stones removed and approaches built to the farms, and other improvements made, but not a word came from Washington.

At length the postoffice department was prodded and word was received they had no information regarding the application made. Then the farmers got busy and got their banker to indite a letter to Congressman Knutson, laying the facts before him. Within 10 days or less came word that the route would be established as requested and the rural route will soon hum with its daily load of precious letters, newspapers and magazines.

Working in a quiet way throughout Crow Wing county, he has assisted to secure favorable consideration of many applications for pensions made by old timers. In the Bay Lake district there was an especially meritorious case in which a successful appeal was made. Congressman Knutson is on the pension committee of the house and so has considerable prestige.

In season and out of season finds Congressman Knutson at work. During this summer season he is personally investigating, at the solicitation of General Hines, the condition of trainees in this territory. It is not a perfunctory examination, made at long distance from a swivel chair and flat top office desk, but it's a personal examination. The congressman bought a serviceable roadster and is covering every inch of the route in such conveyance. He is building a summer home on a lake in Crow Wing county which brings him in hailing condition with every section of his district.

Congressman Knutson made a lot of friends in Brainerd when they heard him deliver his Fourth of July oration here. He is also showing an interest in the Elks convention at Brainerd August 20, 21 and 22 and will strive to bring a large congressional delegation to the city. A large proportion of Minnesota's delegation to congress belongs to the antlered herd.

STATE DEBTS ARE GROWING

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, in his economy program, has set an example which many state governors and legislatures should heed. Minnesota has its era of economy, inaugurated largely by Governor Christianson, but other states are not so fortunate.

The state governments of the United States have increased their bonded debt nearly 50 per cent in the past three years, according to a nation-wide survey of state finance just completed by The Bank of America, New York. The huge debt now amounts to $1,558,742,433.68 or $13.89 for every man, woman and child in the country.

The highest per capita debt of any state in the Union is that of South Dakota, the share of each inhabitant being $93.95, nearly six times as great as the national per capita debt. Oregon is second with $72 per capita, North Carolina third with $38.87, Delaware fourth with $36.76, North Dakota fifth with $36.67 and Massachusetts sixth with a per capita debt of $30.66.

It is interesting to note that the total bonded indebtedness of the states at present is about half a billion dollars greater than the federal debt in 1916 and the per capita is $4.07 larger.

There is considerable food for reflection in these figures and it behooves heavily bonded states to follow the example of the federal government and aim to reduce such indebtedness and to put the brakes on further huge flotations.

NEWSPAPERS exert a great pulling and pushing power. The Springfield Advance-Press notes, for instance, that when your car gets stuck in the mud and the rear wheels spin around and your friends advise you to call for help, get a bunch of newspapers, slip them under the rear wheels, turn on the juice and see the car come out of the mire. Newspapers are great uplifters. When your business gets into a rut, the newspaper will help you out if you will use the advertising columns. Great is the power of the press.

WARM weather brings the problem of sour cream.

A FARMERS' club near Park Rapids, after extensive debate, decided that horses are better for all-around farm work than tractors. Soil conditions, we believe, may have had something to do with their decision.

THE Albert Lea Tribune calls attention to a point in car driving relating to visiting tourists. These visitors coming from other states are liable to have rules and regulations that are entirely foreign to drivers in Minnesota. So caution should be tempered with prudence when one drives his car on the highways these days.

AFTER years of effort on the part of the Chicago Tribune, a safe and sane Fourth of July was established and injuries from fire crackers, fireworks, etc., were a rarity. Now all the good work is being impinged by fatal and other accidents in Minneapolis, small boys being the victims, as they handled fire crackers.

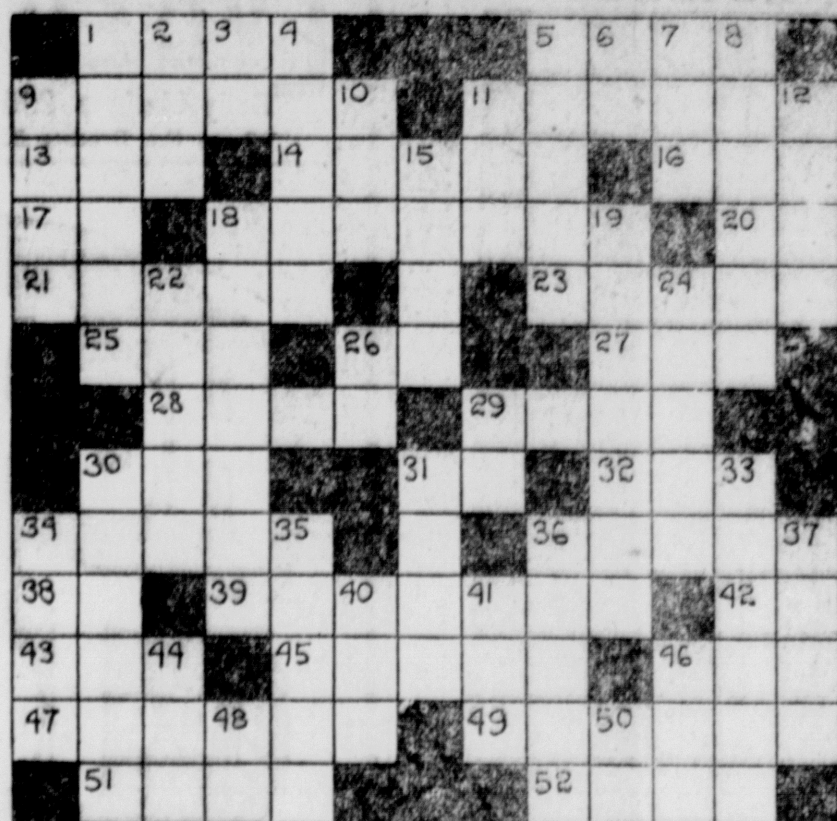

REVERTING to the days when the packers carried supplies on pack animals, the standard hitch which kept the pack on the mule's back was a diamond hitch. An engagement these days might be called a "diamond" hitch, but sometimes the operation is not permanent.

EVERY automobile driver ought to know the road rules, says the Crookston Times. With traffic as dense as it is getting now, one reckless or incompetent driver is a dangerous menace to all others on the road.

DRY agents are finding stills on a number of farms in the vicinity of St. Paul. Those farms evidently measure their production, not so many bushels to the acre, but so many gallons to the acre.

THE Marines are at Santa Barbara. These boys are the "handy" men of the defense arm of the government.

Former Farmer Boy Wins Paris Beaux Arts Prize of $1,200 and a Year's Scholarship

Joseph Kiselewski, American born Polish youth who quit a farm at Browerville, Minn. four years ago to study art in New York, was awarded the Beaux Arts Institute of Design scholarship. It carries with it a prize of $1,200 and a year's study and travel abroad. His design for a memorial tablet to memory of Bertram Grosvenor

Goodhue, the American architect, to be placed in the wall of St. Bartholomew's Church, was declared the best of 14 tablets entered in the competition. The photo shows Kiselewski and his prize winning tablet, "Architecture in Its Relation to Civilization" made on one quarter scale.

COOLIDGE INSISTS UPON HONORS DUE PRESIDENT

By DALE VAN EVERY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, July 6.—Official procedure involving the proper ceremonial in connection with the President has become so complicated by tradition piled on precedent that occasions sometimes arise in which no one knows what to do.

Recently President Coolidge was cruising down the Potomac on the Mayflower. The secretary of the Navy, abroad the Sylph, running faster, drew up from behind and was ready to pass.

Officers of both ships were at loss as to the proper observance of the passing. Ordinarily when the Secretary of the Navy passes a ship of the navy the crew is drawn up at the rail and he is given the secretary's salute as a mark of respect to the civilian head of the navy.

Upon this occasion, however, there was some doubt whether the crew of a ship carrying the President should salute a lesser official. There seemed to be no precedent. The difficulty was surmounted by a message from the Sylph asking in the name of the Secretary of the Navy the President's permission to pass.

Like Royalty

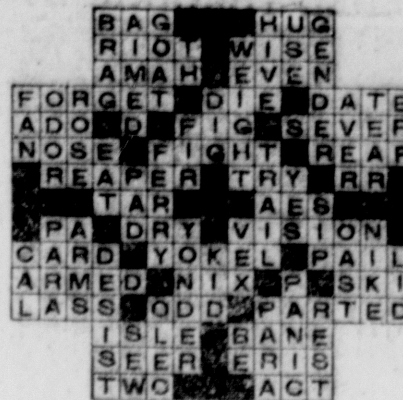

This was but one instance of the many occasions in which the deference due the President is maintained with careful ceremony. As the elected head of the nation he is granted the military and naval honors which in a monarchy devolve upon royalty.

Recent Presidents have dealt with these ceremonial demands in various ways. President Coolidge is rather punctilious. He believes honors due the presidency should be practised. Every time he boards the Mayflower for a pleasure cruise the crew is drawn up at the rail, the President's flag is run up to masthead, he receives the Presidential salute, the national anthem is played, and finally as the yacht pulls out the presidential salute of 21 guns is fired.

President Harding submitted to all formal honors he was told the presidency during the first weeks of his terms but he rapidly became impatient and overruled many of them. He abolished the Mayflower salutes, for example. In many less ostentatious ways, however, he insisted on the formal marks of respect tradition has ruled due the President.

President Wilson paid but the slightest attention to the rules of tradition. When he entertained in the White House he conducted himself as a private host, dispensing with all the formal requirements of presidential precedence. He always discouraged military and naval observances of his arrival and at one time issued orders he should not be given the usual salute.

Solution to Friday's Puzzle

Black and White Frocks Always Gives Service

After all is said and done, there is really nothing smarter than black and white, and a frock of this magic combination may be worn ten times to five when a gown in a bright color is suitable. For the woman of limited income the black-and-white gown is a fashion life-saver. If it is sufficiently smart, and it usually is, it may appear on almost any occasion and still give the effect of being worn for the first time.

The versatility of these black-and-white costumes is amazing, but much of their difference and all of their distinction lie in the skill with which the two tones are put together. If there is too great an area of white on a black frock, or black placed in advisedly on a white gown, the result is hopeless frumpiness, but on the other hand just an accent of black or a piping of white will lift a model from the class of mediocrity to that of smart distinction.

Hats Topped With Flowers

Topped with flowers in matching colors, the new shaded hats in lovely pastel tones reveal the tendency to use more trimming but to employ it with the greatest skill and discretion.

Bright Jabots

Jabots of brilliant colors are used on all white and all black frocks.

Orange Blossoms

The orange is said to indicate a hope of fruitfulness, and the white blossoms, like the rest of the white of the bridal costume, are symbolical of innocence. Orange blossoms as a bridal decoration were introduced in the United States and England about 1820. The custom was of older standing elsewhere.

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"Remember the Alamo!"

What Boonesborough is to Kentucky, the Alamo is to Texas, and both are more than the most famous forts in their respective states. They are monuments to the memory of two great American frontier heroes—Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett—they are national shrines.

The Mission of San Antonio de Valero, commonly called the Mission del Alamo (Alamo being the Spanish word for cottonwood tree) was founded by the Franciscans in 1703 and after various removals was established in its present location in 1722. Soon after the outbreak of the Texan War of Independence in 1835 the Alamo was seized by the Texans.

Its commander early the next year was Lieut. Col. William Barrett Travis, a young Carolina lawyer. Associated with him was Col. James Bowie of Georgia and of Bowie knife fame. They had only about 140 men but in February there came a welcome reinforcement in the person of Davy Crockett, accompanied by some of his neighbors from Tennessee.

On February 23, 1836, Santa Ana, the dictator of Mexico, appeared before the fort and demanded its surrender. Travis answered with a shot from his cannon and a defiant hoisting of his flag. The Mexican leader had more than 4,000 men but he did not care to risk an assault so erected batteries and opened fire.

For eleven days the siege was continued with heavy losses for the Mexicans but without a single casualty among the defenders. In the meantime Travis' appeals for help brought to the Alamo Col. James Butler Bonham, who slipped through the lines of the besiegers, and a detachment of 32 men, led by Capt. J. W. Smith, which cut its way through.

Finally on March 6 Santa Ana ordered a grand assault by a picked force of 2,500 men. Two attacks were beaten back by the desperate Texans but the garrison, weakened by the long vigil and lack of food, could not hurl back the third attempt. The Mexicans swarmed over the walls and for the next few minutes there followed one of the most desperate hand-to-hand encounters ever fought on the American continent. When it ended only five of the 180 defenders were left alive and they were wounded, helpless prisoners. By command of Santa Ana they were killed at once.

But the sacrifice of Davy Crockett and his fellow heroes was not in vain, for the battle cry which swept the field at the decisive battle of San Jacinto, was "Remember the Alamo!" On a monument in the state capitol at Austin commemorating their deeds is this line: "Thermopylae had its messenger of defeat. The Alamo had none."

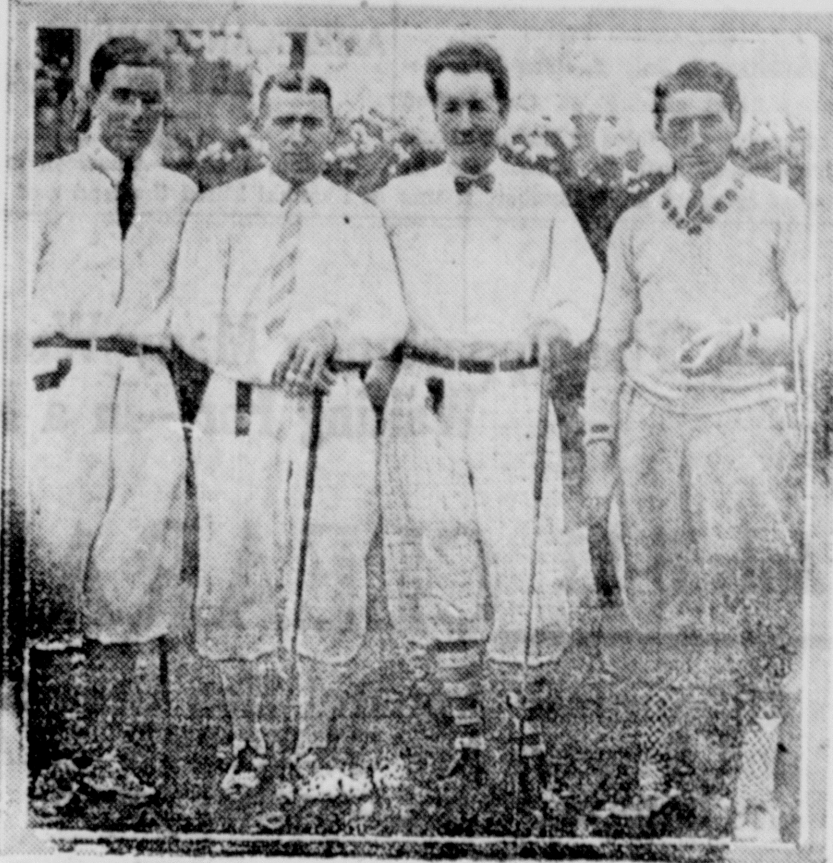

Honors Even

An English hostess was very proud over the elevation of one of her family to the house of lords. "This makes the second of our family in the peers," she remarked to one of her callers. "Have you any relation in the house of lords?" "No," was the calm reply, "but I have two maiden aunts in the kingdom of Heaven."—Boston Transcript.

House Peters' Portrayal in "The Tornado" Proves He is the Screen's Elect

House Peters, whose appearances on the screen have been regrettably few since his great successes in "The Storm" and "Human Hearts," showed conclusively in the Lyceum Theatre last night that he had lost none of that vigor of personality and dramatic ability which made him famous.

Peters plays the name part in "The Tornado," adapted from Lincoln J. Carter's famous play, which, on its first screening lived up to the promises of the advance notices acclaiming it one of the biggest dramas ever made for the screen.

Fortunately most persons have been spared the experiences depicted so convincingly in "The Tornado," which has its last showing tonight.

"Madame Sans Gene" Showing at New Park Tonight and Tuesday

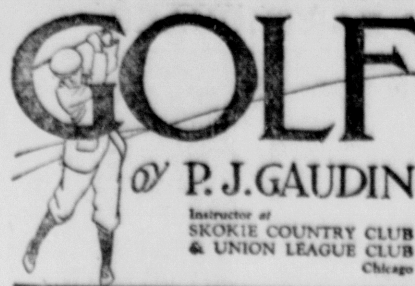

At last "Madame Sans Gene" has been seen in America.

A distinguished company of stars, directors and officials of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, viewed the picture in rough form in the projection room at the Paramount Long Island studio recently and now the entire organization is buzzing with the wonders of the picture.

"It is the triumphant climax of the triumphant career of Gloria Swanson," said Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. "The plaudits which were given her on her return to America, will be redoubled by the American people, when this picture is shown publicly. It is a new Gloria, a great Gloria, a Gloria with all the artistry, charm and power which were foreshadowed by her performance in 'Zaza' and 'The Humming Bird.' It is the greatest picture Gloria Swanson has ever made; it is one of the greatest pictures that have ever been made.

"I have seen Mme. Simone, Rejane and other great artists of the stage play the role of the laundress, who became the Duchess of Danzig. Gloria Swanson's performance in this part will live with the greatest of these.

21—Control of the Club.

As early as possible the beginner at golf should get the feeling of complete control over the club from the beginning to the end of the swing. This control centers in the left hand. There is little danger of using too hard a grip with the left hand. The right is an entirely different matter. A good rule is to grip with the left hand up to the point of feeling full control of the club and short of the point where the grip has a tendency to stiffen the left wrist. At no time must the grip of the right hand interfere with this feeling in the left hand, and especially avoid any tendency for the right hand to take control. That always can be avoided by loosening the grip of the right hand until it merely holds its place on the shaft. It will get into action without any thought and when it should, just before the club connects with the ball.

Very often, especially in cool weather, the surface of the ordinary leather grips becomes so hard and smooth that the club twists in the hand, no matter how tight the grip. If no other means is at hand, scrape the leather with a knife blade until the surface is rough enough to provide friction. In warm weather enough suction usually can be produced by giving the leather a coat of sweet oil. If this is insufficient, dental wax, enough for a small ball of which can be obtained from any dentist, is the best. Failing this, one can use any of the patented preparations, though most of them are ineffective in cool weather. If other means fail, one can have his leather grips turned inside out or use one of the commercial rough leather or rubber grips. There is plenty of choice. Try any or all of them and suit yourself as to the grip you want, but do not end your search until you find a surface that is rough enough or which can be made to furnish enough suction to have the club apparently clinging closely to the hand. In the open tournament at Skokie there was a barbed wire fence just back of the seventeenth tee. A considerable percentage of the professionals, perhaps half of them, rubbed their leather grips against one of the bars to roughen up the leather before driving.

Gasoline for 20% to 30% More Motors

Collier's Weekly quotes Herbert Hoover as saying: "There is room for 20% to 30% increase in the standards of living today."

Increased living standards mean more automobiles, an increased demand for gasoline, and a greater opportunity for the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to serve society.

It is estimated that today more than 88 million Americans enjoy the use of the 17% million automobiles now in service.

In view of this statement and its application, it is obvious that the petroleum industry as a whole and the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) as one of the outstanding units of this industry in particular, will be called upon to render to society a vastly greater service than they have been called upon to render in the past.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes that one of the fundamentals of its service is to decrease the cost of manufacturing and distributing petroleum products by the rigid elimination of waste; to increase the percentage of oil products, especially gasoline, derived from crude petroleum.

Only through such service will it be possible to stretch the supply of crude oil to meet the demand for gasoline.

Mr. Hoover says: "That a general higher buying power can be created by paring down the losses in production and distribution."

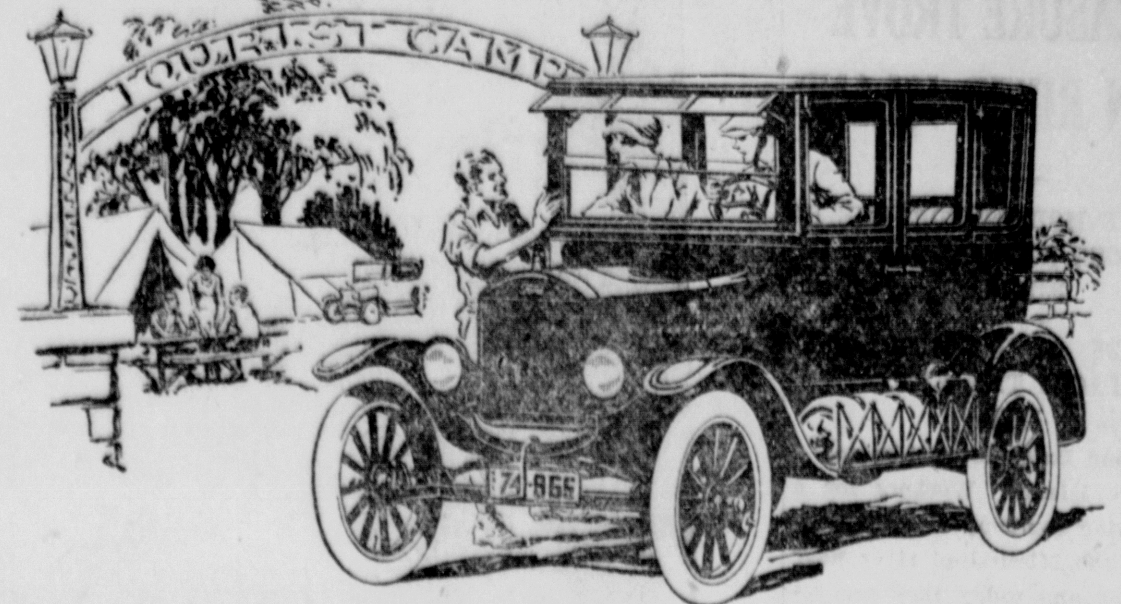

It is such thrifty, far-sighted "paring down" of waste that enables the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to keep its service stations and tank wagons delivering gasoline and oils to you at prices so low that all can enjoy their use.

These low prices have been an important factor in helping to increase the living standards of the American working man, enabling him to ride to work in motor cars and raise his family in the suburbs where rents are lower and conditions more healthful.

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"Remember the Alamo!"

What Boonesborough is to Kentucky, the Alamo is to Texas, and both are more than the most famous forts in their respective states. They are monuments to the memory of two great American frontier heroes—Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett—they are national shrines.

The Mission of San Antonio de Valero, commonly called the Mission del Alamo (Alamo being the Spanish word for cottonwood tree) was founded by the Franciscans in 1703 and after various removals was established in its present location in 1722. Soon after the outbreak of the Texan War of Independence in 1835 the Alamo was seized by the Texans.

Its commander early the next year was Lieut. Col. William Barrett Travis, a young Carolina lawyer. Associated with him was Col. James Bowie of Georgia and of Bowie knife fame. They had only about 140 men but in February there came a welcome reinforcement in the person of Davy Crockett, accompanied by some of his neighbors from Tennessee.

On February 23, 1836, Santa Ana, the dictator of Mexico, appeared before the fort and demanded its surrender. Travis answered with a shot from his cannon and a defiant hoisting of his flag. The Mexican leader had more than 4,000 men but he did not care to risk an assault so erected batteries and opened fire.

For eleven days the siege was continued with heavy losses for the Mexicans but without a single casualty among the defenders. In the meantime Travis' appeals for help brought to the Alamo Col. James Butler Bonham, who slipped through the lines of the besiegers, and a detachment of 32 men, led by Capt. J. W. Smith, which cut its way through.

Finally on March 6 Santa Ana ordered a grand assault by a picked force of 2,500 men. Two attacks were beaten back by the desperate Texans but the garrison, weakened by the long vigil and lack of food, could not hurl back the third attempt. The Mexicans swarmed over the walls and for the next few minutes there followed one of the most desperate hand-to-hand encounters ever fought on the American continent. When it ended only five of the 180 defenders were left alive and they were wounded, helpless prisoners. By command of Santa Ana they were killed at once.

But the sacrifice of Davy Crockett and his fellow heroes was not in vain, for the battle cry which swept the field at the decisive battle of San Jacinto, was "Remember the Alamo!" On a monument in the state capitol at Austin commemorating their deeds is this line: "Thermopylae had its messenger of defeat. The Alamo had none."

LOGGERS FIND TREASURE TROVE IN RIVER ISLAND

RETRIEVE MODEST FORTUNE IN
LOGS NEAR FORT
RIPLEY

30 POUNDS OF DYNAMITE DIS-
PLACES THE KEY
LOG

(St. Cloud Daily Journal-Press)

Treasure Island! Workers for a small milling company found it yesterday in the Mississippi river near Fort Ripley and today they are retrieving the treasure.

For several years there has been a small island of considerable beauty, known as Enchanted Island, in the Mississippi near Fort Ripley, long a favorite spot for canoeists' rendezvous and it was generally supposed that the pretty little spot was of natural origin.

Yesterday, however, a well-placed thirty pound shot of dynamite at the southern extremity of the island displaced a key log upon which a dead-head jam has been piled for years and a comfortably valuable treasure trove of logs was released for recovery by a crew working for a small mill recently erected at Fort Ripley and each member of the logging crew is nearly $1,000 richer as a result of the discovery.

Five crews of workers, on piece rates, have been searching the river bottom for deadheaded logs for weeks for the Parker Lumber company of Minneapolis, which recently erected a small mill to turn the logs found into lumber at Fort Ripley. The crews are paid 35 cents for each log recovered and some of the loggers of former days have returned to the run.

One crew, more fortunate than the rest, investigated the under pinnings of the peaceful little island in the center of the river last Sunday at the suggestion of an old time logger and the outfit found that the island was nothing but a jam of the finest pine logs, about two and one half acres in area. The island must have been formed early in the logging days as top logs had rotted, earth had accumulated and a fine verdure of green trees had overgrown it.

After some study of the situation, the charge of dynamite was placed and soon the members of the lucky crew, three in number, were hauling the released logs from the island and over to the mill at a rate of about 200 per hour. Enough logs have been released to keep up the high rate until tomorrow when another charge of dynamite will be placed and several thousand more released. Between five and ten thousand logs will be recovered during the next week or so by the workers and the men are enjoying the highest pay of their lives as they pull in the forest giants.

The crew members, with an eye to business and quicker profits, purchased a horse the moment the rich haul was discovered and the recently acquired nag was harnessed on shore and as a raft of the logs is formed from the pile Dobbin faithfully plods inland, dragging the logs to the mill. Formerly a retrieved dead-head was piloted ashore by "twisting" in the accredited manner of former days of lumbering.

Curiously enough, a national misfortune made the work of recovering deadheads at this time profitable. Following the big storms through Illinois and Indiana earlier in the year, an unprecedented demand for timbers, of the type which the pine logs serve best for, occurred and the mill was erected to meet that demand.

The Captain's Gray Horse

By ELLA F. MOSBY

WNU Service

THERE is a strange tale of the night after a bloody conflict, when the horses of two opposing cavalry regiments, having been but carelessly picketed, broke loose, and in the uncertain light of the camp-fires again engaged in a fierce struggle. Screaming, biting, charging with desperate courage, they renewed the conflict of the day, not allowing themselves to be separated until more than half their number lay dead or disabled on the field. Whether this be true or not, certain it is that the more intelligent cavalry horses learn to love the wild excitement and thrill of war, and even imbibed somewhat of the esprit de corps of their owners. My own mare beautiful and spirited creature—I have often seen single from head to foot at the first bugle-note of "boots and saddles." It would have taken a strong hand to hold her back.

My story, however, is not of her, but of our captain's gray, a powerful and fiery horse, the finest in our regiment for speed, bottom, brain and pluck. Despite an imperturbably grave air, he was continually playing tricks, especially on the other horses.

The captain was a reserved and apparently a lonely man. His horse was, in fact, his only intimate friend, and when in the second year of the war the captain was killed—shot dead in his saddle while returning from a reconnoitering expedition—his gray followed him to the grave.

I succeeded as captain, and somehow it seemed natural that I should take care of the horse, though I never rode him. He went with his old company, however, just the same. If he were fastened anywhere when we were called to mount, he made such an awful row that I couldn't stand it. I ended by letting him go loose just as his master had done; he always came instantly at a certain whistle, and was perfectly obedient so long as you did not try to send him back. At every drill, on every march, he kept his old place, or as near it as possible. One night we were going through a tangled bit of timber, hardly daring to breathe, much less speak, when the gray threw up his head with a loud snort.

At once the whole wood was alive before us with men firing on every side. In another moment we should have been surrounded and retreat impossible. As it was, we barely cut our way out, the gray literally fighting by my side. A ghostly sort of light it was; the new moon just up, and in the glimmering light everything shadowy and confused, friends and foes, horses and riders.

"By G—, the last captain did us a good turn," exclaimed one of the men when we were fairly beyond shot.

"The last captain! What do you mean?" I asked.

"Beg pardon, nothing sir. Only," hesitating, "twas the captain's gray gave that cry; we'd been in, head foremost, but for that!"

After that I had a curious feeling all through the action that, if I only turned quickly enough I should see a shadowy rider upon the shadowy gray, though, we were all shadows in the dusky, half-lit wood.

On Sunday morning—the third since the captain's death—the great battle began. The smoke hung thick over the field, the air was stifling with the smell of gunpowder, as at a thunder storm in a cheap theater. Slightly to our right was a hill from which the enemy poured hot and fast a rain of death. We were as yet protected by the woods, though a ghastly fringe of the dead lay without the shelter. All at once I saw a rider detach himself from a group still farther to our left, and ride at a gallop toward us. He rode straight to our colonel, saluted, said a few words, saluted again, and rode back, not perceptibly the faster because he was the living target for a hundred rifles.

Our colonel turned to us: "We must take those guns, boys. After we leave these woods you cannot hear any orders, but there is no need. That's all. Take the guns!"

There was a whirl, a plunge, a dash forward. I remember my mare gave a wild snort of joy as she rushed on, and that the gray was abreast. We were in the midst of it instantly. There was a cry of "Close up ranks!" a scream, another gap, we closed up, and again and again wide rents were torn asunder as we went on, and again closed. Suddenly my own mare was down. I clutched at the floating mane of the gray that loomed above me, and was up again; but somebody else had drawn rein. The line wavered, was on the verge of wheeling in blind, hopeless panic before the face of death, when, all at once, the gray horse threw his head in air, uttered a loud, piercing neigh, like a fierce challenge, and dashed on with the fury of a whirlwind. The others followed with my saber at every opposing figure, but hardly with conscious intentions; and the next moment I was over the low earthworks, among the guns. My comrades—all who were left—were close behind me, and the hill was ours!

It is said that this charge was the turning-point of the whole battle. I was promoted for bravery on the field, and for a while, at least, counted a hero. Yet, so far as any purpose of mine or any voluntary action was concerned, why, I knew no more than the dead! No more than the dead? Perhaps not as much.

"Home Manager--- Purchasing Agent--- Art Director---Wife"

Just a slim girl, maybe, or a motherly woman with sweet eyes and white hair—but what a responsibility is hers!

She is the active partner in the business of running a home. She buys most of the things which go to make home life happy, healthful and beautiful. Through her slim, safe fingers goes most of the family money.

And wisely and well it is usually spent too—far better than the average man could spend it himself. For women are better purchasing agents than men. They compare prices, weigh values and shop carefully.

They read advertisements regularly. LOGGERS FIND TREASURE TROVE IN RIVER ISLAND

RETRIEVE MODEST FORTUNE IN
LOGS NEAR FORT
RIPLEY

30 POUNDS OF DYNAMITE DIS-
PLACES THE KEY
LOG

(St. Cloud Daily Journal-Press)
Treasure Island! Workers for a small milling company found it yesterday in the Mississippi river near Fort Ripley and today they are retrieving the treasure.

For several years there has been a small island of considerable beauty, known as Enchanted Island, in the Mississippi near Fort Ripley, long a favorite spot for canoeists' rendezvous and it was generally supposed that the pretty little spot was of natural origin.

Yesterday, however, a well-placed thirty pound shot of dynamite at the southern extremity of the island displaced a key log upon which a dead-head jam has been piled for years and a comfortably valuable treasure trove of logs was released for recovery by a crew working for a small mill recently erected at Fort Ripley and each member of the logging crew is nearly $1,000 richer as a result of the discovery.

Five crews of workers, on piece rates, have been searching the river bottom for deadhead logs for weeks for the Parker Lumber company of Minneapolis, which recently erected a small mill to turn the logs found into lumber at Fort Ripley. The crews are paid 35 cents for each log recovered and some of the loggers of former days have returned to the run.

One crew, more fortunate than the rest, investigated the under pinnings of the peaceful little island in the center of the river last Sunday at the suggestion of an old time logger and the outfit found that the island was nothing but a jam of the finest pine logs, about two and one half acres in area. The island must have been formed early in the logging days as top logs had rotted, earth had accumulated and a fine verdure of green trees had overgrown it.

After some study of the situation, the charge of dynamite was placed and soon the members of the lucky crew, three in number, were hauling the released logs from the island and over to the mill at a rate of about 200 per hour. Enough logs have been released to keep up the high rate until tomorrow when another charge of dynamite will be placed and several thousand more released. Between five and ten thousand logs will be recovered during the next week or so by the workers and the men are enjoying the highest pay of their lives as they pull in the forest giants.

The crew members, with an eye to business and quicker profits, purchased a horse the moment the rich haul was discovered and the recently acquired nag was harnessed on shore and as a raft of the logs is formed from the pile Dobbin faithfully plods inland, dragging the logs to the mill. Formerly a retrieved dead-head was piloted ashore by "twisting" in the accredited manner of former days of lumbering.

Curiously enough, a national misfortune made the work of recovering deadheads at this time profitable. Following the big storms through Illinois and Indiana earlier in the year, an unprecedented demand for timbers, of the type which the pine logs serve best for, occurred and the mill was erected to meet that demand.

The Captain's Gray Horse

By ELLA F. MOSBY

WNU Service

THERE is a strange tale of the night after a bloody conflict, when the horses of two opposing cavalry regiments, having been but carelessly picketed, broke loose, and in the uncertain light of the camp-fires again engaged in a fierce struggle. Screaming, biting, charging with desperate courage, they renewed the conflict of the day, not allowing themselves to be separated until more than half their number lay dead or disabled on the field. Whether this be true or not, certain it is that the more intelligent cavalry horses learn to love the wild excitement and thrill of war, and even imbibe somewhat of the esprit de corps of their owners. My own mare beautiful and spirited creature—I have often seen tingle from head to foot at the first bugle-note of "boots and saddles." It would have taken a strong hand to hold her back.

My story, however, is not of her, but of our captain's gray, a powerful and fiery horse, the finest in our regiment for speed, bottom, brain and pluck. Despite an imperturbably grave air, he was continually playing tricks, especially on the other horses.

The captain was a reserved and apparently a lonely man. His horse was, in fact, his only intimate friend, and when in the second year of the war the captain was killed—shot dead in his saddle while returning from a reconnoitering expedition—his gray followed him to the grave.

I succeeded as captain, and somehow it seemed natural that I should take care of the horse, though I never rode him. He went with his old company, however, just the same. If he were fastened anywhere when we were called to mount, he made such an awful row that I couldn't stand it. I ended by letting him go loose just as his master had done; he always came instantly at a certain whistle, and was perfectly obedient so long as you did not try to send him back. At every drill, on every march, he kept his old place, or as near it as possible. One night we were going through a tangled bit of timber, hardly daring to breathe, much less speak, when the gray threw up his head with a loud snort.

At once the whole wood was alive before us with men firing on every side. In another moment we should have been surrounded and retreat impossible. As it was, we barely cut our way out, the gray literally fighting by my side. A ghostly sort of light it was; the new moon just up, and in the glimmering light everything shadowy and confused, friends and foes, horses and riders.

"By G—," the last captain did us a good turn," exclaimed one of the men when we were fairly beyond shot.

"The last captain! What do you mean?" I asked.

"Beg pardon, nothing sir. Only," hesitating, "twas the captain's gray give that cry; we'd been in, head foremost, but for that!"

After that I had a curious feeling all through the action that, if I only turned quickly enough I should see a shadowy rider upon the shadowy gray, though, we were all shadows in the dusky, half-lit wood.

On Sunday morning—the third since the captain's death—the great battle began. The smoke hung thick over the field, the air was stifling with the smell of gunpowder, as at a thunder storm in a cheap theater. Slightly to our right was a hill from which the enemy poured hot and fast a rain of death. We were as yet protected by the woods, though a ghastly fringe of the dead lay without the shelter. All at once I saw a rider detach himself from a group still farther to our left, and ride at a gallop toward us. He rode straight to our colonel, saluted, said a few words, saluted again, and rode back, not perceptibly the faster because he was the living target for a hundred rifles.

Our colonel turned to us: "We must take those guns, boys. After we leave these woods you cannot hear any orders, but there is no need. That's all. Take the guns!"

There was a whirl, a plunge, a dash forward. I remember my mare gave a wild snort of joy as she rushed on, and that the gray was abreast. We were in the midst of it instantly. There was a cry of "Close up ranks!" a scream, another gap, we closed up, and again and again wide rents were torn asunder as we went on, and again closed. Suddenly my own mare was down. I clutched at the floating mane of the gray that loomed above me, and was up again; but somebody else had drawn rein. The line wavered, was on the verge of wheeling in blind, hopeless panic before the face of death, when, all at once, the gray horse threw his head in air, uttered a loud, piercing neigh, like a fierce challenge, and dashed on with the fury of a whirlwind. The others followed with one mad impulse, in which I was borne irresistibly on, striking instinctively with my saber at every opposing figure, but hardly with conscious intentions; and the next moment I was over the low earthworks, among the guns. My comrades—all who were left—were close behind me, and the hill was ours! It is said that this charge was the turning-point of the whole battle. I was promoted for bravery on the field, and for a while, at least, counted a hero. Yet, so far as any purpose of mine or any voluntary action was concerned, why, I knew no more than the dead! No more than the dead? Perhaps not as much.

STANDARD OIL

ROBBED OF $1,000

Thieves Break Into Filling Station
Corner Front and Broadway

FORCE OPEN SMALL WINDOW

Amount Stolen Consisted of Receipts of 2 Busy
Days

Robbers broke into the Standard Oil Company's filling station at the corner of Front street and South Broadway on Sunday night, opening the safe and taking a large amount of money, roughly estimated at about $1,000.

Entry into the filling station was gained by forcing a small window in the toilet room. The safe was opened by chiseling off the dial knob and then manipulating the tumblers through the small hole thus made.

In taking the money which was in the cash box in the safe, a leather wallet, containing over $200 that had been left in a pigeon-hole, was overlooked. The amount stolen can only be estimated at this time, but consisted of cash and checks, the receipts of July 4th and 5th, two very busy days in the oil business.

No clues were left upon which to work, the robbers evidently being experienced in their line. No shoe prints or finger marks could be found. The night was ideal for the robbery, which is thought to have occurred during the rain storm.

Otto Heikkinen was the clerk on duty Sunday evening. He locked up the filling station about 10 o'clock. E. W. McCullough discovered the robbery this morning, when he opened the station at 7 o'clock.

The auditor is expected to arrive from the cities today, and will make a complete check-up to ascertain the exact loss.

DEPLORES WASTE OF HUMAN LABOR

New York, July 6.—Waste of human labor is a serious handicap to the industries of this country in the struggle for the world's markets, in the opinion of Lawrence W. Wallace, executive secretary of the American Engineering Council. Europe's great advantage, he points out, is cheap labor. To offset this, Wallace urges that steps be taken to eliminate the waste, and to extend the use of material handling and processing machinery in the workshops of the United States.

"It is evident," he says, "that if American industry is to hold its position in world trade it must eliminate the enormous waste occurring and this can be done by extending and intensifying the management function."

"European industry has an unlimited supply of cheap labor. We have a limited supply, and labor in America is paid more in real money than anywhere in the world. Furthermore, American industry and commerce will be confronted with an annual reduction in the addition to the unskilled labor supply of about 800,000 as compared with years previous to the war, due to the restricted immigration policy."

Mr. Chase, in his office as state auditor, is especially fitted to speak on this important matter, and will give the citizens of Brainerd some valuable insight into the subject.

A special invitation to attend Wednesday night's meeting is extended to the Crow Wing County Tax Reduction League, the Business Men's Association, members of the Chamber of Commerce, city and county officials, as well as to all other civic organizations and individuals. It is realized that the ladies are as much interested in taxation as the men, and an invitation is extended to all ladies to be present.

Mr. Chase will be the guest of the local Lions club at its regular luncheon at 6:15 o'clock Wednesday evening, and will speak at the Chamber to the public, delivering his principal address at 8 o'clock. Car Skids Over Embankment

C. G. Osterlund, while driving his car south of Aitkin, during the week, ran it into loose dirt near the edge of the road and slid over the embankment. Fortunately, a tree prevented the car from turning over, which would have resulted in serious injury to the occupants, who, besides Mr. Osterlund, were O. M. Wavvig and Nels Hoglund.

The wrecking car from one of the garages in Aitkin was commissioned to lift the car back to the roadbed. About the only damage done was to the top which was badly wrecked.—Deerwood Enterprise.

Might in the Jungle

The lion, noted as being the noblest of the jungle's beasts, is, of course, a mighty hunter. His ferocity is proverbial. All animals as well as men become its victims. The African buffalo, however, is often its master, and elephants sometimes are able to overpower both lions and all members of the tiger family.

BOLSTAD WINS 10,000 LAKES GOLF TOURNEY

PICK SENATORS TO OUTSTAY "A'S"

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, July 6.—It is a legend of major league baseball that as the teams stand on July Fourth they will finish in October. It does not mean necessarily that the pennant races are over or that the team in first place will win the pennant but it is an established fact that the championship battles are fairly well settled in early July and that the teams around first place are good for the remainder of the season.

It seems certain now that the Washington Senators and the Philadelphia Athletics will fight it out for the American League and that the New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Pirates will settle the argument in the National League.

Many critics believe that the Senators will outlast the Athletics because they are an older and more experienced team. In this connection it is interesting to have sentiment favoring a veteran club because of its age. The collapse of the Yankees was blamed upon the age of the team and the success of the Senators is being predicted because of its age.

Bucky Harris obviously favors veteran players else he would not have stocked the team with Vean Gregg, Dutch Reuther, Stan Coveleskie, Joe Harris, Deacon Scott and Hank Severeld. The Senators were not a young club before these veterans were added to the roster. Harris was one of the youngest players on his team; he is approaching the age of thirty. The Senators average around 34 years of age.

On the other hand, the Athletics, one of the youngest teams in the major leagues, average around 28 years of age. Mack says he will win the pennant because he has a young team and Clarke Griffith says the Athletics cannot hope to win the pennant because they are too young.

Griffith aroused the ire of the veteran Philadelphia manager recently when he said that the Athletics were vastly overrated, that they were playing far over their heads and they would finish in the first division. He said that Simmons, the slugging outfielder, was a bust and that Max Bishop, the star second baseman, was only a flash. Mack answered that he had tried to make a winning team of veteran players, that he had failed and that he was going to string along in the future with young hustling players.

The Senators may win the pennant this season but the club will have to do something to provide young blood for the future. The Yankees made the mistake of assuming that a flock of old players could go on forever and the team went to pieces with a suddenness that was almost staggering.

The Cincinnati Reds may be a factor in the National League pennant races but it looks like the club is depending too much on perfect pitching and there aren't enough on the Cincinnati staff to carry a light hitting team through to a championship.

The Pittsburgh Pirates as a team are much better balanced and they seem to have developed a fighting heart, the lack of which caused so much disappointment in Pittsburgh in recent years.

One month ago it looked like the Giants couldn't be caught in the National League and that the pennant race would be a joke before the end of July. But the pitching staff suddenly went wrong, although it never was a woe of a staff and the team was almost wrecked by a succession of injuries that filled the bench with disabled regulars. Before the season started it looked like McGraw, with the greatest reserve strength in the major leagues, could not be bothered with injuries but no one could forecast the string of bad luck that the champions encountered.

McGraw blamed the wreck almost entirely upon the lively ball that he says is being used and he was the first manager to go on record with an admission that there was a jump in the new ball and a dangerous jump. Previous to that no manager had disputed the magnates when they said that the new life in the ball was the result of a superior quality of wool that was available for the yarn since the war. The players, however, have complained for three years, that the ball had been changed and they predicted that some player would be killed if something was not done to curb the vicious hitting.

It was significant that before the first of July the major league sluggers had hit more than 500 home runs, something that would have drawn a laugh of derision if it had been predicted ten years ago. In all the history of baseball there never has been such a record for hard hitting.

QUIET MANAGERS COME INTO OWN

For some reason it had been the opinion of major league managers that a player of the fiery, aggressive type was the only one fitted to lead a team to success.

When George Sisler was appointed manager of the St. Louis Browns, it was said that he was too quiet and backward to become a successful manager. Sisler was the retiring type of a player, lacking the color and the personality that would have made him the most spectacular star in his day. Sisler hasn't won any pennants with the St. Louis Browns, but he has not been a failure by any means. No other manager could improve upon his results with the same material that he has.

When Ty Cobb was appointed to lead the Detroit Tigers the fear was expressed—and it was shown to have been well founded on several occasions—that Cobb was too fiery and that he would expect his players to do just as well as he did.

Cobb, theoretically, was the ideal type of a field leader, a brilliant individual, a hard player, and a vigorous aggressive fighter. But Cobb did not turn out to be a highly successful manager. It is true that the Tigers had defects that the greatest of managers could not overcome but there are reasons to believe that the veteran star razed and abused his players. They may not have laid down on him, of course, but they did not hustle for him.

Very little was known of Bucky Harris until Clarke Griffith announced that he was the manager of the Washington Senators. Before that time Harris was just the second baseman on an ordinary club, a good player, who had never impressed any one with his color or personality. It was rather freely suggested at the time that Clarke Griffith had hired a cheap yes-man as a figurehead manager and that Harris wouldn't have much to say about the team. How mistaken this idea was was shown when Harris, leading the team on his own, went out and won an American League pennant and a world's series in his first years as a manager. Harris, it has been shown, had the ideal qualities of leadership but he had never been given the opportunity to use them.

MRS. R. W. LITTLE WINS THE
WOMEN'S CHAMPIONSHIP
AT BREEZY POINT

Breezy Point Lodge, Pequot, July 6.—Lester Bolstad, state public links champion, added another medal to his list today when he defeated Captain Roscoe Fawcett, Interlachen, in the finals of the 10,000 Lakes golf championship yesterday at Breezy Point. Bolstad won 4 up at the 33rd hole, after playing first class golf.

Mrs. R. W. Little, Interlachen, won the woman's championship from her sister, Mrs. Edward C. Anderson.

In Saturday's play at the second annual 10,000 Lakes golf championship tournament, Mrs. Edward C. Anderson, Minneapolis, won from Mrs. Larry Soule and Mrs. R. W. Little, last year's champion, from Mrs. Don McLane, in the woman's championship event.

In the first and second rounds on Saturday, Lester Bolstad eliminated Larry Soule, 4 up and 3, and then put out R. W. Little, 3 up and 1.

Roscoe Fawcett, of Interlachen, Minneapolis, defeated C. Weinbagen, of Town and Country 5 up and 4, and S. F. Nelson, Interlachen, 3 up and 2.

Mrs. R. W. Bullard won the woman's second flight Saturday, defeating Mrs. J. E. Belden, St. Paul.

MINNESOTA RESORTERS GOLF TOURNAMENT

Dr. L. M. Boyd, chairman of the Minnesota Resorters Golf Tournament committee for the Alexandria Golf Club, announces that the dates for this event this year are July 23, 24 and 25.

The committee members have been appointed and are now busy making plans for this summer's tournament which is expected to exceed all others in the matters of number of entries and interest. Last year there were 142 entries in the Resorters' Tournament, and even this figure would have been exceeded had it not been for the necessity of changing the dates at the last moment.

There will be more cups offered and more prizes awarded also than there were last year, when there were nineteen presented. One of the features of the tournament this year, it is expected, will be the contests for team honors, the winners in which will be awarded a cup. These scores will be figured from the five lowest cards turned in by any group of five men from any one club. It is not necessary that the names of these five men be entered in advance and thus it is possible under this arrangement for a club which wishes to win this event to enter any number of players.

A silver cup will be offered to the one of the best hitters that ever played baseball was a quiet player of the same type as Sisler and Harris. He would have been a Babe Ruth before the Babe came along if he possessed the same appeal to the crowd that the Babe had. But Hornsby hadn't the color. He didn't have the instinct of the showman and he never did draw at the gate like Cobb or Ruth.

When Hornsby, through a sudden switch in management, was placed in charge of the Cardinals recently, it was looked upon as a thrifty financial move by the club owners. Hornsby was drawing $25,000 a year as a player and it would have been good business for the management to get rid of a salaried manager and saddle Hornsby with the leadership without an increase in pay.

Suitable prizes will also be awarded to the consolation winners of all other flights.

The entry fee for the tournament has been set at $4.00. No fee will be charged the tournament players who wish to use the course on Sunday, July 26, the day following the tournament.

The tournament committee plans on making this event just as attractive for the "par golfer" as for the "duffer."

The clubs expected to participate in this tournament will represent the following towns:

BOLSTAD WINS 10,000 LAKES GOLF TOURNEY

PICK SENATORS TO OUTSTAY "A'S"

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, July 6.—It is a legend of major league baseball that as the teams stand on July Fourth they will finish in October. It does not mean necessarily that the pennant races are over or that the team in first place will win the pennant but it is an established fact that the championship battles are fairly well settled in early July and that the teams around first place are good for the remainder of the season.

It seems certain now that the Washington Senators and the Philadelphia Athletics will fight it out for the American League and that the New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Pirates will settle the argument in the National League.

Many critics believe that the Senators will outlast the Athletics because they are an older and more experienced team. In this connection it is interesting to have sentiment favoring a veteran club because of its age. The collapse of the Yankees was blamed upon the age of the team and the success of the Senators is being predicted because of its age.

Bucky Harris obviously favors veteran players else he would not have stocked the team with Veon Gregg, Dutch Reuther, Stan Coveleskie, Joe Harris, Deacon Scott and Hank Severid. The Senators were not a young club before these veterans were added to the roster. Harris was one of the youngest players on his team; he is approaching the age of thirty. The Senators average around 34 years of age.

On the other hand, the Athletics, one of the youngest teams in the major leagues, average around 28 years of age. Mack says he will win the pennant because he has a young team and Clarke Griffith says the Athletics cannot hope to win the pennant because they are too young.

Griffith aroused the ire of the veteran Philadelphia manager recently when he said that the Athletics were vastly overrated, that they were playing far over their heads and they would finish in the first division. He said that Simmons, the slugging outfielder, was a bust and that Max Bishop, the star second baseman, was only a flash. Mack answered that he had tried to make a winning team of veteran players, that he had failed and that he was going to string along in the future with young hustling players.

The Senators may win the pennant this season but the club will have to do something to provide young blood for the future. The Yankees made the mistake of assuming that a flock of old players could go on forever and the team went to pieces with a suddenness that was almost staggering.

The Cincinnati Reds may be a factor in the National League pennant races but it looks like the club is depending too much on perfect pitching and there aren't enough on the Cincinnati staff to carry a light hitting team through to a championship.

The Pittsburgh Pirates as a team are much better balanced and they seem to have developed a fighting heart, the lack of which caused so much disappointment in Pittsburgh in recent years.

One month ago it looked like the Giants couldn't be caught in the National League and that the pennant race would be a joke before the end of July. But the pitching staff suddenly went wrong, although it never was a woe of a staff and the team was almost wrecked by a succession of injuries that filled the bench with disabled regulars. Before the season started it looked like McGraw, with the greatest reserve strength in the major leagues, could not be bothered with injuries but no one could forecast the string of bad luck that the champions encountered.

McGraw blamed the wreck almost entirely upon the lively ball that he says is being used and he was the first manager to go on record with an admission that there was a jump in the new ball and a dangerous jump. Previous to that no manager had disputed the magnates when they said that the new life in the ball was the result of a superior quality of wool that was available for the yarn since the war. The players, however, have complained for three years, that the ball had been changed and they predicted that some player would be killed if something was not done to curb the vicious hitting.

It was significant that before the first of July the major league sluggers had hit more than 500 home runs, something that would have drawn a laugh of derision if it had been predicted ten years ago. In all the history of baseball there never has been such a record for hard hitting.

QUIET MANAGERS COME INTO OWN

For some reason it had been the opinion of major league managers that a player of the fiery, aggressive type was the only one fitted to lead a team to success.

When George Sisler was appointed manager of the St. Louis Browns, it was said that he was too quiet and backward to become a successful manager. Sisler was the retiring type of a player, lacking the color and the personality that would have made him the most spectacular star in his day. Sisler hasn't won any pennants with the St. Louis Browns, but he has not been a failure by any means. No other manager could improve upon his results with the same material that he has.

When Ty Cobb was appointed to lead the Detroit Tigers the fear was expressed—and it was shown to have been well founded on several occasions—that Cobb was too fiery and that he would expect his players to do just as well as he did.

Cobb, theoretically, was the ideal type of a field leader, a brilliant individual, a hard player, and a vigorous aggressive fighter. But Cobb did not turn out to be a highly successful manager. It is true that the Tigers had defects that the greatest of managers could not overcome but there are reasons to believe that the veteran star razzed and abused his players. They may not have laid down on him, of course, but they did not hustle for him.

Very little was known of Bucky Harris until Clarke Griffith announced that he was the manager of the Washington Senators. Before that time Harris was just the second baseman on an ordinary club, a good player, who had never impressed any one with his color or personality. It was rather freely suggested at the time that Clarke Griffith had hired a cheap yes-man as a figurehead manager and that Harris wouldn't have much to say about the team. How mistaken this idea was was shown when Harris, leading the team on his own, went out and won an American League pennant and a world's series in his first years as a manager. Harris, it has been shown, had the ideal qualities of leadership but he had never been given the opportunity to use them.

WINS MEDAL

DEFEATS IN FINALS CAPTAIN ROSCOE FAWCETT OF INTERLACHEN

MRS. R. W. LITTLE WINS THE WOMEN'S CHAMPIONSHIP AT BREEZY POINT

Breezy Point Lodge, Pequot, July 6.—Lester Bolstad, state public links champion, added another medal to his list today when he defeated Captain Roscoe Fawcett, Interlachen, in the finals of the 10,000 Lakes golf championship yesterday at Breezy Point. Bolstad won 4 up at the 33rd hole, after playing first class golf.

Mrs. R. W. Little, Interlachen, won the woman's championship from her sister, Mrs. Edward C. Anderson.

In Saturday's play at the second annual 10,000 Lakes golf championship tournament, Mrs. Edward C. Anderson, Minneapolis, won from Mrs. Larry Soule and Mrs. R. W. Little, last year's champion, from Mrs. Don McLane, in the woman's championship event.

In the first and second rounds on Saturday, Lester Bolstad eliminated Larry Soule, 4 up and 3, and then put out R. W. Little, 3 up and 1.

Roscoe Fawcett, of Interlachen, Minneapolis, defeated C. Weinhausen, of Town and Country 5 up and 4, and S. F. Nelson, Interlachen, 3 up and 2.

Mrs. R. W. Bullard won the woman's second flight Saturday, defeating Mrs. J. E. Belden, St. Paul.

MINNESOTA RESORTERS GOLF TOURNAMENT

Dr. L. M. Boyd, chairman of the Minnesota Resorters Golf Tournament committee for the Alexandria Golf Club, announces that the dates for this event this year are July 23, 24 and 25.

The committee members have been appointed and are now busy making plans for this summer's tournament which is expected to exceed all others in the matters of number of entries and interest. Last year there were 142 entries in the Resorters' Tournament, and even this figure would have been exceeded had it not been for the necessity of changing the dates at the last moment.

There will be more cups offered and more prizes awarded also than there were last year, when there were nineteen presented. One of the features of the tournament this year, it is expected, will be the contests for team honors, the winners in which will be awarded a cup. These scores will be figured from the five lowest cards turned in by any group of five men from any one club. It is not necessary that the names of these five men be entered in advance and thus it is possible under this arrangement for a club which wishes to win this event to enter any number of players.

A silver cup will be offered to the one of the best hitters that ever played baseball was a quiet player of the same type as Sisler and Harris. He would have been a Babe Ruth before the Babe came along if he possessed the same appeal to the crowd that the Babe had. But Hornsby hadn't the color. He didn't have the instinct of the showman and he never did draw at the gate like Cobb or Ruth.

When Hornsby, through a sudden switch in management, was placed in charge of the Cardinals recently, it was looked upon as a thrifty financial move by the club owners. Hornsby was drawing $25,000 a year as a player and it would have been good business for the management to get rid of a salaried manager and saddle Hornsby with the leadership without an increase in pay.

winner of each flight, and also to the consolation and first flight even winners. Cups will also be given to the low medalists, both men and women, as has been the custom in the past.

Suitable prizes will also be awarded to the consolation winners of all other flights.

The entry fee for the tournament has been set at $4.00. No fee will be charged the tournament players who wish to use the course on Sunday, July 26, the day following the tournament.

The tournament committee plans on making this event just as attractive for the "par golfer" as for the "duffer."

The clubs expected to participate in this tournament will represent the following towns:

Brainerd, St. Cloud, Willmar, Montevideo, Bemidji, Detroit, Fergus Falls, Graceville, Morris, Little Falls, Sauk Centre, Glenwood, Park Rapids, Omaha, Des Moines, Duluth, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Sioux City, Kansas City and Lincoln.
